FALL 2024

Softie Stories

Megan Howell

Washington, D.C.

In beautifully melancholy stories of magical realism, the women and girls in Softie transform their bodies and test their sanity, trying to find meaning in the loneliest of places.

“Howell’s collection . . . carves a needed space for female characters of color that move beyond the stereotypical white, beautiful, rich characters who dominate the subgenre.”

—Kristen Gentry, author of Mama Said: Stories

I Hate It Here, Please Vote for Me

Essays on Rural Political Decay

Matthew Ferrence

Meadville, PA

In essays on showing goats at the county fair, planting native grasses in the front lawn, the political power of poetry, and getting wiped out in an election, Ferrence offers a counter-narrative to the stereotypes of monolithic rural American voters.

“A fascinating look at the making of political and cultural tropes from the inside.”

Enclosure Architect

A Novel

Douglas W. Milliken

Saco, ME

An indigent queer sculptor details the culmination and dissolution of her chosen family of artists, bohemians, and libertines in an American city engulfed in civil conflict.

“Fascinating, strange, and buoyed by a narrative voice that is both somehow floating above the action yet thoroughly grounded in detail . . . there are moments of absolute poetry.”

Cutover Capitalism

The Industrialization of the Northern Forest

Jason L. Newton Charlotte, NC

Compelling, candid, and sometimes violent stories drawn from oral history frame the American lumberjack at the intersection of labor and environment.

“Blurring the boundary between exploiting trees and exploiting workers, Cutover Capitalism is an interesting re-interpretation of the field of forest history.” —Richard W. Judd, author of Second Nature: An Environmental History of New England

The Madison Women

Gender, Higher Education, and Literacy in Nineteenth-Century Appalachia

Amanda E. Hayes New Philadelphia, OH

By uncovering how higher education and gender roles evolved in Appalachia over time, this book delivers a history that contradicts the stereotype of the region as hostile to education.

“A mastery of weaving personal and archival research to resurrect a critical time in education in Appalachia.” —Travis A. Rountree, author of Hillsville Remembered: Public Memory, Historical Silence, and Appalachia’s Most Notorious Shoot-Out

Saharan Winds

Energy Systems and Aeolian Imaginaries in Western Sahara

Joanna Allan Newcastle upon Tyne, UK

A history of Saharan winds melds into a discussion of energy development and the politics of energy systems.

“The mixture of archival, literary and fieldwork-derived ethnographic material is a refreshing approach.” —Dominic Boyer, author of Energotitics: Wind and Power in the Anthropocene

This Book Is Free and Yours to Keep

Notes from the Appalachian Prison Book Project

Edited by Connie Banta, Kristin DeVault-Juelfs, Destinee Harper, Katy Ryan, and Ellen Skirvin

Morgantown, WV

Through the essays, letters, and artwork created by people in prison, this collection provides insight into the Appalachian Prison Book Project—a nonprofit that provides books to incarcerated people in West Virginia, Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, and Maryland.

“A beautiful book that really stands alone in literature exploring mass incarceration . . . about the literary and intellectual lives of people incarcerated and the modest but urgent work of grassroots book projects.”

Indigenous Ecocinema

Decolonizing Media Environments

Salma Monani Gettysburg, PA

Foregrounding the voices of Indigenous intellectuals, Monani reframes our popular and scholarly understandings of Indigenous cinema as discursively and materially entangled in the environment.

“The arguments Monani makes around issues of place, time, and affect comprise a compelling case for the centrality of Indigenous cinematic mediations of ecological consciousness.”

—Joanna Hearne, author of Native Recognition: Indigenous Cinema and the Western and Smoke Signals: Native Cinema Rising
